PROFILE

My passion is invested in the backend development and consumption of the web. Coupled with this, is the drive to make the next generation of desktop/web application using the latest development processes and ideologies. As a social person the team dynamic appeals to me greatly, giving me the opportunity to work with like-minded people. I also have a vested interest in both American culture and sports, having visited America on many occasions, including my gap year before starting university - leaving only Alaska and Hawaii yet to be conquered.
